
How Signal helped transform Quilter's competitor tracking.

Tim Skelton-Smith is Deputy Communications Director at Quilter, formerly known as Old Mutual Wealth. We spoke to Tim about his experience with Signal.

The challenge

Before trying Signal, Quilter had previously only monitored media coverage of its different companies and divisions at a basic level, resulting in internal stakeholders comparing them against each other, which was extremely inefficient. They needed a solution that enabled them to monitor their own performance against key competitors quickly and easily.

"Previously we were comparing internal business units. Now, we're scanning the whole marketplace."

TIM

The Solution

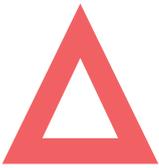

Tim was attracted to Signal's unlimited monitoring, enabling them to track as many competitors as they wanted for a fixed fee. Signal also provides Quilter with monthly analysis reports, which allows the team to present key insights to senior management quickly and effectively.

Quilter has benefited from Signal's real-time news delivery, which alerted the team to a key radio interview within minutes of it taking place. Tim also appreciates Signal's customer service, with quick response times helping Quilter deal with urgent situations.

"You don't feel like you're just another client."

TIM

The results

Quilter has benefited from being able to scan all parts of their landscape, from competitor activity to the impact of corporate sponsorships, in far more depth. The communications team can share more information with Quilter's executive committee, helping them quantify the results of their work.

Quilter's communications team is now able to monitor competitors' activities in greater detail and in real time. The data insights and monthly analysis reports provided by Signal are readily shareable with the executive committee.

Going forward, Quilter is looking to extend the use of the Signal platform beyond the communications department so other teams can benefit from the insights it can provide.

"We would certainly recommend Signal as a solution for media monitoring, competitor tracking and reporting."
